Researchers state the innovation could aid drive clean power deployment in nations with limited grids or in separated, coal-based energy systems. According to their version, Kosovo might see a solid boost in wind and PV ability if power-to-heat is coupled with thermal energy storage space for fixed-capacity district home heating.

Kosovo* is using an EU grant for public calls for families and firms to install solar power panels and solar thermal collectors. The subsidies for photovoltaics amount to EUR 250 per kW, or EUR 200 per kW for businesses that set up larger systems. There is a bonus for female-owned enterprises.

Upon the completion of the solar system installation, the project will generate 22 long-term jobs, sustained throughout the operational life of the facility. It is important to note that the solar energy system operates with zero emissions, maintaining a neutral and stable impact on the climate.

The Transmission, System and Market Operator (KOSTT) of Kosovo* said its Chief Executive Officer Mustafë Hasani (pictured left) signed a deal on connecting a 150 MW photovoltaic plant to the grid with head of Solar Energy Group Europe Egbert Schnuse.

To support the green transition in Kosovo*, one of its largest solar photovoltaic plants will be constructed on former ash dump fields near Pristina with a capacity of up to 100 MW. The electricity sector in Kosovo is almost entirely dependent on coal-fired power plants.

It refers to solar district heating systems that store surplus solar energy from the summer in seasonal storage for heating purposes in winter. As the scheme above shows, the solar circuit starts at the bottom of the seasonal ...

The business environment in the Republic of Kosovo is becoming one of the most competitive in the region.
